THREE ACRES OF NEW PLANTING IDEAS TO BE ON DISPLAY FOR MEMBERS ONLY.

R. KIRK EVANS HEADS FOUNDATION

New officers for the 1984-85 year were named at the June 19 meeting of the Board of Trustees for the Foundation with Kirk Evans unanimously elected president.

Kirk brings a number of skills to the job which should be of great help to the Foundation not the least of which is a firm feeling for the importance of the Arboretum and the Foundation.

He says, "When I first heard of the concept of the Arboretum and what it stands for, I decided it is very worthwhile."

Kirk lives with his wife, Midge, and five children in Arcadia. He serves as Vice-President, Finance, at Gerald J. Sullivan & Associates in downtown Los Angeles. His educational background includes a B.S. in Accounting from Brigham Young University, and an M.B.A. from University of California, Berkeley. He is a Certified Public Accountant.

At his first meeting of the Board of Trustees he was accorded high marks for running a smooth meeting, taking the reins from Jack Shepherd and moving from his position as Treasurer to the top spot with alacrity.

Although he is fluent in French, he spared us from our linguistic lackings and stuck to English.

In addition to Kirk, your other elected officers are James P. Curry, first vice-president; Frank Regan, 2nd vice-president; R. Bruce McCallum, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the California Arboretum Foundation are expected to turn out in record numbers for their special preview of GARDEN SHOW '84 on Thursday evening, October 18, from 4 to 8 p.m. which opens officially the next day for its 10-day run on the Arboretum grounds.

Described as perhaps the best opportunity of the year to acquire fresh ideas for fall and winter gardens, the show will feature garden designs of many of the little known flowers and shrubs from around the world that are easily grown in southern California.

Some three acres of space will be devoted to flower garden ideas created by the cream of southern California horticulturists to help our members fill their gardens with color and beauty for the coming fall and winter season.

More than 30,000 visitors are expected to attend the show which will emphasize the ease with which southern Californians can have gardens of unusual beauty with a minimum of effort by taking advantage of the wide variety of flowers, plants and designs to be seen with experts on hand to help in every way, whether your garden be large or small, a patio or a corner.

Only three years old, the fall show is already recognized as one of the premier shows of the West Coast and the nation and is designed to keep pace with the changing needs of gardeners as they move from large to small or small to large spaces for gardening.

New plant materials are constantly being developed by industry and botanical gardens such as the Arboretum to help make the development of new fall and winter gardens a never ending challenge, for those who want that and a lovely spot of color with minimum maintenance for others.

Considered largest of its kind in the west, GARDEN SHOW '84 will feature garden designs and displays by commercial landscapers, retail and wholesale nurseries, garden clubs, horticultural groups and works by collegiate research teams.

While garden shows in the grand style of Chelsea in England or Floriade in Holland are seldom seen now days because of their cost and relatively small interest in large garden layouts, GARDEN SHOW '84 will have something for everyone with an urge to have and grow something of beauty in their yards and patios.

"Local gardeners often overlook the colorful plants from all over the world that thrive in Southern California," said Francis Ching, director of the Arboretum, "when they settle for ordinary greenery. The ideal climate in this area opens up possibilities for choosing among thousands of plants that don't demand any more care than some of the more common landscape materials."

At GARDEN SHOW '84, members of the Foundation will have a great chance at the new introductions and a chance to browse among creative model gardens and pick up new ideas to transform your outdoor living space. Most of the garden vignettes use imaginative outdoor structures or fountains as focal points to add drama to a backyard or patio, no matter what size.

Several exhibits feature a particular plant family such as a collection of 20 species and cultivars of staghorn ferns [Platycerium]. Most of these ferns have flat, forked fronds that project like living green antlers from the slabs of wood from which they hang.

Examples of many of the 2,000 species of bromeliads fill another display.

EDUCATION PROGRAMS SCHEDULED

(by Wendy Sekovich)

Did you know

scattering mint leaves in doorways discourages ants?
radishes can be grown all year in southern California?
an orchid can be grown without soil?

These and other interesting facts have been discovered at the Sunday Arboretum Discovery Program. You are missing a lot of fun and horticultural information if you haven't been attending.

In April, the Education Program re-established itself at the Arboretum with Sunday walking tours and horticultural lectures. Since then, enthusiasm and attendance has grown at an amazing rate.

Check your brochure for the dates and plan to join us on Sundays.

Adult Education classes begin September 10. Day and evening classes include Poisonous, Medicinal and Edible Plant Identification; Beginning Bonsai; Perennials; Ikebana; and Holiday Decorations.

The classes are filling rapidly and pre-registration is suggested, although you may register at the first class as space permits.

Let me close with advice to the leaf-lorn: the proper way to cut a rose is to cut just above the 5-leaflet leaf with at least 2 leaves remaining on the stem below the cut. This way you insure more blooms on the stem left behind.

COTTAGE SCENE CALLED 'BEAUTY UNADORNED'

(by Sandy Snider)

Visitors often ask how the building of the Queen Anne Cottage was received. Very well, indeed, if you accept the following excerpt from the Los Angeles Daily Times of May 8, 1886:

'From the main drive a handsome shaded arbor leads up to the cottage, where the visitor treads a marble walk to the marble steps which rise to a marble floored verandah. But, it is upon entering the cottage itself that one becomes aware of the fact that wealth and artistic taste have gone hand in hand in producing the most elegant effects. The floors are being laid with Wilton carpets at a cost of $5 per yard while the furniture and bric-a-brac have been brought from the proprietor's rooms at the Baldwin Hotel, in San Francisco. Marble mantels of Parian whiteness with deep-set grates - in which it is intended to burn gas made on the premises from naphtha, when the weather is cool - lend an air of solid comfort to the rooms.'

'In the parlor is suspended a gold gilt chandelier, of candelabrum design, the jets being at the tops of the imitation candles. It is, however, in the windows that the aesthetic hand of the artist has found scope, and where the owner of this truly royal lodge has chosen to exhibit his taste. One of these contains a fine portrait of Byron, another of Shakespeare, a third a bathing scene where "beauty unadorned" is represented in Edenic loveliness, in the liquid element or swinging above it from vine, in utter oblivion of the profane gaze of "peeping Toms."

'Baldwin is in the East looking after his racing horses. His married daughter is in New York while Mrs. Baldwin is in San Francisco. The cottage will be ready for occupancy this summer. Meals will be taken at the adjoining house, reached by a wire bridge to be thrown across the water that intervenes.'
